

Annapurna Circuit Trek completes the round journey of the Annapurna Mountain Range in the Annapurna Region of Nepal. The trail rises to an altitude of 5,416m on the Thorong La Pass, touching the edge of Tibet. Thorong La is the highest pass on this trek.

The Annapurna Circuit Trek offers an enthralling voyage through some of Nepal's most breathtaking scenery located in the center of the Himalayas. It is among the world's ten most popular treks. During this trip, you will come across a number of naturally decorated devices that are visually appealing and touch the hearts of all hikers. Trekkers always enjoy the breathtaking views of the region's stunning mountains, including Mt. Annapurna I, II, and III (8,091m), Mt. Dhaulagiri (8,167m), Machhapuchhre (6,998m), Nilgiri (7,041m), Himchuli (6,441m), Tukuche Peak (6,920m), and Mt. Lamjung Himal (6,986m), which contribute to making the lengthy journey unforgettable.

Without a doubt, one of the most well-known treks in the Himalayas is the Annapurna Circuit. The Annapurna Circuit was first offered to trekkers traveling to Nepal over fifty years ago, and it has since developed into one of the world's top trekking routes. The circuit travels through a variety of landscapes and terrains as it circles a large portion of the Nepal Himalayas.

A range of communities, cultures, landscapes, terrains, climatic conditions, and ecosystems are encountered throughout the trek. The Annapurna Circuit is a unique walking experience because of these diverse and rich experiences. However, the majority of the circuit's original foot trails have merged with the rough jeep track in recent years as a result of road construction. These roads have made life easier for the locals and the circuit more accessible and flexible for the trekking community, even though many of the ardent hikers who loved the traditional foot trail have been disappointed. One can now choose to walk the whole Annapurna Circuit or just a portion of it.