THE BROOKFIELD HOTEL EMSWORTH

CIVIL FUNERALS & MEMORIAL SERVICES

Civil Funerals were first introduced in England in 2002 and filled a vital gap in the existing provision for traditional, religion-based funerals. It offers a more personalised form of “life celebration” when someone dies and is driven by the wishes, beliefs and values of the deceased and their family. The focus throughout the ceremony is on fulfilling the specific wishes of the deceased and on reflecting the personal preferences of close family and friends in a more appropriate and meaningful way.

Contents can include elements of religion with a favourite piece of religious music or reading, but also tributes and eulogies, memories, songs and music as well as time for silent reflection.

The Celebrant is on hand to guide and advise those involved in arranging the ceremony and assist in structuring the ceremony in such a way as to provide a unique tribute to the person who has died.

The Brookfield Hotel is a family hotel which has been established in Emsworth for over 40 years and celebrated and commiserated with its regular guests over all this time. It is natural that having hosted christening and naming parties for new members of the family, and then the weddings of growing members, that the staff at The Hotel would wish to assist their guests at this most difficult and sad time in a family – saying goodbye to a loved one.

All our rooms can be decorated to your requirements for the funeral ceremony and after cremation or interment a reception can be held in one of our private dining rooms. Please ask for our separate leaflet giving details of catering.
