

Discovering international contemporary photography in Brunswick

The Museum for Photography Brunswick exhibits international contemporary photography with a main focus on the artistic examination of said medium. This makes the museum one of the few that concentrates on the diversity of photographic imagery and artistic possibilities in the context of societal issues.

TEXT: JESSICA HOLZHAUSEN

With its two classicist former gatehouses built in the 19th century, the museum also counts among the city's unique architectural features. The museum is idyllically situated by the river Oker and next to the 'Louvre of the North', the Herzog Anton Ulrich Museum. Visitors can explore the dialogue between photography, painting and sculpture.

The Museum for Photography regularly holds exhibitions showcasing its collection. This includes photography from the 19th century with, for example, works of Nadar or Julia Margaret Cameron, as well as estates like the one of Käthe Buchler (1876 – 1930). In an international cooperation, her work is also currently shown in the United Kingdom. The Museum for Photography's collection also contains the work of important representatives of international contemporary photographic art, and with the project 'Jürgen Becker. New York 1972' in 2017, the museum displayed the facets of photography in the famous writer's work. From 21 March to 6 May 2018 the exhibition will now also be shown in the Kunsthaus Nürnberg/Kulturquartier, as one of the museum's cooperations.

Elsewhere in its calendar in 2018, from 27 April to 26 June, the museum will house the first German solo-exhibition of Stephen Gill's work and will additionally show his 'Nobody Books' in a separate exhibition about photo books.

www.photomuseum.de
Instagram @museumfuerphotographie and @museumfuerphotographiekids

Left: Stephen Gill, from the series 'Talking to Ants', 2009-2013/2013. Photo: © Stephen Gill / Courtesy of Christophe Guye Galerie, Zurich

Top right: Jürgen Becker, from the series 'New York 1972'. Photo: © Jürgen Becker / Courtesy Boris Becker, Cologne

Below right: The Museum for Photography Brunswick. Photo: © Uwe Brodmann