

4th September 2020

Hi,

It's a new term and a very different one to what we are used to!

We know that getting your students back into a routine and engaged with learning after a strange 6 months is going to be a challenge for you, but we're sure we can help you get your class and your whole school excited to write!

Trapped.
The clock is ticking. Time is running out.
Fright. Fight. Freedom.

Challenge your students to write a mini saga (a story written in just 100 words) on the theme of 'trapped', which they can interpret as they wish to. We're sure they can make every word count to create a thrilling mini saga!

You'll find enclosed an entry form where students can use the fun quiz and story starters to help inspire their trapped tale, plus there's an optional lesson plan (with four levels of differentiation) and presentation available online along with the Student Writing Portal (where your students can directly type their work) in case home learning is needed again... we've tried to cover all bases for you!

Head to our website to watch the exciting video that introduces this activity to your students: www.youngwriters.co.uk/trapped and you can request as many further free student entry forms, posters or packs for colleagues as you need.

I hope your students enjoy writing their mini sagas; we're all waiting patiently at Young Writers HQ for them to arrive as we can't wait to read their 'trapped' tales...

Best wishes
