Tsaghkadzor was first inhabited in the 3–5th cc. During early Middle Ages (4–5 cc), these lands belonged to the Varajhnuni dynasty, the governors of the Armenian king's estates. In the 5th century the gorge was passed to the influential Kamsarakan dynasty.

In the beginning of the 17th century, nomadic tribes, having captured "Gorge of Flowers", recalled the location Darachichak, which is the Turkish translation of Tsaghkunyats gorge. The city was again called Tsaghkadzor in 1947.

Today Tsaghkadzor is considered to be an internationally recognized resort, where alpine skiing is especially developed. Tsaghkadzor is at the same height as Mexico.
