Cyber risks highlighted

A THIRD of U.K. businesses have suffered cyber attacks due to employees working from home, cyber security firm CybSafe Ltd. reported. The firm found that a quarter of respondents had not implemented basic security precautions, such as installing antivirus software, and 30% don't have any measures in place to restrict files access. The survey found that the number of employees working remotely has increased at 80% of U.K.-based businesses over the past two years.
