Manager Commentary

November was another weak month for Russian shares, contrasting with an upbeat mood on western markets. We see no drivers for Russia, so long as the risk of new sanctions hangs over it. The US market looks most attractive globally thanks to anticipation of tax reform, and further gains are likely when the new legislation is finally approved. European markets are also in good shape on the back of economic recovery in the Eurozone.

We remain conservative on risk assets and keep our selective approach to share purchases.

In November we sold shares of Dixy Group, Volkswagen and MD Medical Group, and bought shares of General Electric Co.
