Manager Commentary

The US stock market stayed at maximum levels through September. Global optimism and a break from sanctions news helped Russian shares to rebound strongly from the lows of early September. But the Russian asset purchases looked like short covering, and the Russian market has yet to respond to the next round of sanctions, promised by the US for October-November. The American stock market is preparing for elections to the US Congress on November 6.

We believe that current investor concerns about rising yields are emotions while strong fundamentals of the US economy haven't changed.

We slightly increased our position in ADRs of China Auto Logistics.
