Manager Commentary

Ruble devaluation in November made dollar-denominated GDRs of Russian companies more attractive. We bought GDRs of Lukoil, Novatek and Phosagro, increasing the weight of exporter shares in the portfolio.

The Russian market continued to fall in November, hit by currency devaluation, rising political risks and economic slowdown. Exporters fared better than stocks geared to the domestic market, and the ruble-denominated MICEX market actually showed gains. Overall market behavior was multidirectional and irrational.

We expect the situation to stabilize by 1Q15, but trading will remain volatile in the short term.
