Manager Commentary

RTS index has fallen recently due to the weakening of the ruble and political risks. Ruble-denominated MICEX index has been relatively stable thanks to devaluation. Russian currency finally broke out of the established range driven by combination of negative factors, and further weakening is possible. That is why we are cautious about Russian stocks in the short-term. On the contrary, global markets have shown relatively positive dynamics and we are still looking for bargains, although selectively.

We speculated with GDRs of Norilsk Nickel, slightly increased our position in shares of Rosinter Restaurants, and sold shares of Coca Cola Co.
