Decosit cancels 2020 edition due to coronavirus

New edition to take place in September 2021

Brussels, 14 March 2020 – Decosit 2020 was cancelled earlier today due to the on-going coronavirus spread. Scheduled to take place this June, Decosit comes too close to guarantee the safety standards the organisation puts at the top of its priority list. The next edition of the international interior textile fair will take place in September 2021.

Last month, the trade fair organisation decided to move Decosit to an earlier date. Originally scheduled in September, the fair was joined by other shows such as Proposte, who postponed their event due to the Covid-19 outbreak. To avoid an oversupply this autumn, the fair was moved to June.

While the current Belgian measures don't stretch until June, the organisation now decided to cancel the fair precautionarily. Decosit stresses the importance of social distancing to remain healthy and safe and believes June will be too close to guarantee everyone's safety. As every country also follows a tailor-made schedule, measures will be lifted at various times. That makes it hard to guarantee, for visitors, a full list of exhibitors and, for exhibitors, a large enough public of visitors.

Decosit's next edition will be held in September 2021. Exact dates will be announced soon.

ABOUT DECOSIT

Decosit is an interior textile fair held in Brussels. The show is the result of a collaboration between the Belgian textile federation (Fedustria) and Belgian textile producers looking to create more European attention for the home fabric industry. Decosit attracts producers and buyers worldwide.
