Inspecting uniforms can be one of the trickiest aspects of formal parades – especially if the cadets and adults are not from your service

n this first article in a three-part series, we outline tips from each of the services as to what to look for as part of an inspection. Here, Master at Arms Rob Grenfell, the RN Cadet Liaison Officer at CCF RN HQ, discusses Royal Navy uniform inspection.

Tips for the other services to follow in the next two issues of CCF Connected magazine ...

UNIFORM TIPS

3A PARADE UNIFORM

THIS IS NORMALLY the parade uniform for the CCF, and will be worn when contingents are required to look extremely smart. This is sometimes referred to by sections as their cadet number 1 uniform

ESSENTIALS

- Caps to be straight and cap badges to be in line with the nose
- >> Uniforms to be clean and pressed using a hot iron; check for tramlines
- White caps must be pristine; check they have been cleaned properly
- Shoes must be clean and polished using black shoe polish

3B GENERAL DUTY RIG

CAN BE WORN ashore or afloat throughout the year. May be worn by officers afloat, at the discretion of command.

ESSENTIALS

- >> Belt to be worn with trousers
- >> Cap tallies, where worn, to have bow tied above the left ear
- >> Check for any marks on the white caps, which should show up easily

3C GENERAL DUTY RIG

THIS UNIFORM CAN be worn ashore or afloat throughout the year.

ESSENTIALS

- >> Jumper should be clean and fluff-free
- >> Officers collars to be worn inside the jumper
- Cadets collars to be worn outside the jumper

4 ACTION WORKING DRESS

THIS IS THE standard working uniform of the Royal Navy and has existed for more than 60 years. Cadets should be mindful of that fact that this uniform is fire retardant and the laundry instructions should be followed to ensure it remains that way. The AWD uniform can easily look scruffy if it is not properly cared for.

ESSENTIALS

- >> Beret badge to be worn over the left eye
- >> Beret must be properly moulded, clean and fluff-free
- >> Senior cadets may wear a peaked cap
- Shirt sleeves can be rolled up or buttoned down. Shirt is always tucked in to trousers
- Trousers are very inflexible when new; they will need to be steam ironed to add creases
