

DATA SHEET, OCTOBER 2010

Police investigation of vandalization of Palestinian trees in the West Bank

Yesh Din Monitoring, 2005-2010

A

Data summary

Since 2005 Yesh Din has been monitoring the Samaria and Judea (SJ, West Bank) district police investigation of 97 separate incidents of vandalization of Palestinians' trees in the Occupied Territories (OT). In many cases the vandalism is directed against olive trees but other kinds of trees are also harmed, including almond and lemon. 23 incidents of vandalization of Palestinian trees were documented by Yesh Din in 2010 alone. Along with the data summary, this sheet details each of the incidents and the results of its investigation.

Our review of the investigation status of each of the 97 aforementioned incidents shows that not a single investigation has so far led to filing an indictment against persons suspected of involvement in vandalism against Palestinians' trees.<sup>1</sup>

Yesh Din does not claim to document all of the offenses committed by Israeli civilians against Palestinians and their property in the OT (including vandalization of trees) but the investigation files monitored by Yesh Din constitute a very broad sample of the total investigations conducted by the Judea and Samaria (West Bank) district of the Israel Police into ideologically-motivated offenses by Israeli civilians against Palestinians in the West Bank.<sup>2</sup> Yesh Din is not aware of a single case where an indictment was made for involvement in vandalism of trees belonging to Palestinians. Yesh Din's monitoring shows that if any such indictments were made at all, their number is negligible compared to the number of incidents of vandalism of trees whose investigation ends in failure.

Following a previous data sheet on this matter published by Yesh Din in November 2009 (and based on the study of the results of 69 investigations that were being monitored by Yesh Din at the time), the Israel Police told the press that in the three previous years 60 investigation files had opened leading to the serving of three indictments.<sup>3</sup> In its response, the Israel Police explained its failure in those investigations by claiming many of the offenses in question were "often carried out at night", by "lone perpetrators," as well as claiming that Palestinians "sometimes wait months or years" before they file complaints.<sup>4</sup>

B

Investigation of tree vandalization incidents, 2005-2010

Of the 97 investigation files into vandalization of Palestinian trees that Yesh Din has been monitoring:

- Not a single indictment was filed following any of these investigations.
- 84 investigation files closed. Of those:
  - 72 investigation files were closed on grounds of "unknown perpetrator."
  - 12 were closed on grounds of insufficient evidence to prosecute.
- 12 are still under investigation
- The investigation of one incident ended and the file were transferred to the prosecutor's review to decide its result: whether to close it or file an indictment.

1. Following one incident involving stone throwing at a Palestinian family's house in Hebron and setting fire to a tree in the house's garden, an indictment was filed against a defendant (and even then only following an appeal by Yesh Din against the initial decision to close the file without filing an indictment against the suspect). However, in that case the arson was a part of the assault incident and therefore the incident is not included in the figures presented here. Likewise, with the intention of concentrating in this document solely on data about the vandalization of trees, we do not include here figures about incidents of attacks on harvesters during the harvest, theft of fruit from trees or vandalism of wheat fields.
2. For figures on Yesh Din's ongoing monitoring of police investigations into offenses by Israeli civilians against Palestinians in the West Bank, see Yesh Din reports A Semblance of Law: Law Enforcement Against Israeli Civilians in the West Bank (pp. 89-95) and Too Little, Too Late: the State Attorney's Supervision of Police Investigations into Israeli Civilians' Offenses against Palestinians (pp. 16-21).
3. Despite repeated requests, the spokesman of the JS district of the Israel Police refused to provide Yesh Din with any details of the three indictments it claimed were submitted following incidents of tree vandalization.
