featured that heavily in my night out experience. I often wonder whether I'm missing out...until I see the delights on offer: greasy lumps of meat with even greasier chips? Perhaps I'll pass, thank you.

That is, until the new 'Alpha on Wheels' came onto the scene. As the name suggests, the idea was cooked up by the same mind that has brought Oxford Alpha Bar, and then the Vaults and Garden Cafe and the Woodstoch Dell. These stalwarts of the Oxford organic scene are favourites with students and it was students that Will Pougle with students and it was students that Will Pougle with students and it was students and with students and it was students and with the control of the cultimary collective, says prompted the idea for this better-for-you burger van.

Struated just by the Taylorian institute on St. Giles, the punchy smells of the black-beam Mayan burger and steak anderivines, compete with the perhaps areas who cleaned in choracteristic and the state of the stat

Will's unique bebab van idea has already generated a lot of interest, not only from hungry students, but from the Telgraph and even B8C One, riding on the wave of seasonal and organic cooking that is currently flooding the TV schedules. It has not all been easy salling for this trend-setting stall; pitches getting fough to ver, staff shortages, even the angle of the vigo and the stall of the vigo and the chocket bas to reflect the vigo and the chocket bas to stall of the vigo and the chocket bas to stall of the vigo and vigo

This Jamie Oliver of St. Giles has hopefully started a urena mast and tresh tood, whoo knows? Maybe we'll see the aromatic landscape of late-night Oxford change - from chips to chillis, grease to granary, perhaps even better - polysterene for paper! Like so many food reviews though, the test is in the tasting - go by and try, you won't be disappointed.

One autumn night after dinner I was horribly waked from my snooze. My hackles stood up -I'm a poor young pup Cos I've got the firework blues Cos I've got the firework blues.

One autumn evening the wife and I Had dined on potatoes and good pork pie When a shuddering boom And a shimmery light Transported me back to another night And all of a sudden I saw them again (The ghostly legions of infantry men) Fight and die on the banks of the Seine. And every year I'm hit by the fear

The unmanly tears you'll have to excuse; Put it down to the firework blues.

We're probably not the only ones whose Idea of fun isn't ashing and oohs: Others among you would rather choose To stay huddled in bed, Blankets over the head. Oh the pounding heart As the night splits apart And while you think it's fun and a bit of sport Spare a thought for all those With the firework blues.

If he really went up in smoke and flames It wouldn't be a disaster

Rockets, roman candles, Sparklers, bangers and Catherine wheels

While the cats all cower indoors

While the cats all cower indoors. We chuck bangers at the other schools' kids In our never-ending wars. Sparklers weave as their handlers' names Are written in the smoky air, Then gutter and die, or burn bare fingers Making us shout and swear. The shells explode and colours glow bright While we share beer and cider, And the sky lidost up on bonfer pright.

And the sky lights up on bonfire night Like the new hadron collider
