

As Chair of the Governing Body of Foxmoor School, I welcome you to our website. I hope it gives you a flavour of our school but, of course, nothing is better than a visit. When you arrive here you will be greeted with smiles from all you meet, and both the staff and the children will welcome you. Foxmoor is a lively, dynamic place; there is always something special going on: from children rehearsing their latest dance sequence, or the brass band playing in the hall, to Year 6 leading a 'Flash Mob' on the playground. For the uninitiated this is a dance which the whole school -including the teachers and visitors if you are here, join in. The children will tell you of their latest adventures, the charity they are currently supporting or that it's 'Granny's birthday today!'

I feel privileged to work with a dedicated group of people who have so much knowledge and experience to bring to the school, from industry, education, the armed forces, higher education and even 'Education Inspection'. Although we all come from very different backgrounds, we have one overwhelming desire: to keep Foxmoor flying the flag for quality, excellence, high standards and innovation in Primary Education, and ensuring that, through this, every child has their chance to shine.

We work with highly-skilled and motivated staff who strive to maintain the school's well-deserved, high reputation. It is difficult to get to the top and it is even harder to stay there, but year-on-year they deliver and meet the ever-increasing targets set for them.

This is only achieved through the determination to give our pupils the very best start we can and a total lack of complacency. We evaluate rigorously, constantly searching and researching ways we can improve, or ways we can meet the latest legislation and changes without losing the best that we have.

It is hard work but very rewarding when we see the endeavours of the children and we are constantly amazed at their talents and eagerness to learn and improve.

I wish you well finding the right school for your child.
