BACKGROUND TO THE READINGS AT MASS TODAY

First Reading : Jeremiah 31 : 31-34

The years 640-580 B.C. are the best documented of Israel's long history. Jeremiah belongs to the sadness, unfaithfulness and defeat of those years - a voice crying out on God's behalf, pleading for belief and trust in God rather than in temporary political alliances.

The Prophet has just been speaking about God as a farmer planting seed and rearing cattle, and of a new understanding of judgment - that the people will be judged as individuals (the children will not suffer for the father's sins); and then comes this extraordinary passage: a New Covenant. There will be no need for circumcision, the Law, the Temple, priest or prophet, because God will speak directly to the human heart where the law of love is written.

Everyone will be forgiven personally, will know God and be offered personal forgiveness.

Second Reading : Hebrews 5 : 7-9

The Letter to the Hebrews was written towards the end of the first century by someone fearful for Jews wanting to return to Judaism. He wants to show that Christ Jesus has fulfilled all that the Old Testament was hoping for and is the long-awaited Messiah - the final revelation of God's love.

Today's reading takes a look at the personal and emotional life of Jesus, a life inspired by prayer. We remember mornings and evenings when Jesus went quietly to pray alone. We remember his suffering tears in the Garden of Gethsemane, the Passion and Death and his weeping over Jerusalem. There were tears at the death of Lazarus, there was anger at the moneychangers in the Temple, there was affection for Martha and Mary.

In his humanity Jesus became an example and inspiration in whom we can believe.

Gospel Reading : John 12 : 20-33

This passage follows Jesus' entry into Jerusalem. His hour has come, and we remember the Wedding Feast at Cana when he assured Mary "My hour has not yet come," when he answered her request. Jesus' lyrical words remind us of the Agony in the Garden - the prayer to the Father, acceptance of death, comfort given from heaven when the Father speaks.

The Greeks seeking to speak to him symbolise the Gentile world ready to share his redemptive death and life-giving teaching. Philip and Andrew came from Bethsaida, a town where Jews and Gentiles lived easily together.

Disciples (servants) are invited to share Jesus' suffering so that they can share his glory. Because of Jesus we, too, can hear God's voice. When Jesus is lifted up from the earth (Crucifixion and Ascension) he draws the whole world to himself. We die and ascend in union with him.

Light for the Blind is a registered charity based in the Leeds Diocese. Fr Thomas has opened hospices for the dying and destitute in India and he is being persecuted for his Christian faith and work. Thousands of people have been cared for, especially those of lower caste, and intense jealousy has been aroused. We pray for Fr Thomas, his helpers and those they help.

POSTBAG

A Parish Story

He saw her with her mother going on board the ferry to Ireland and said to his friend "That's the girl I'm going to marry." His friend laughed. "You've never seen her before. How can you say that?"

On board, he went looking for them and waited until the girl went for a walk and he (he was 21, she 17) went up to speak to her mother. They chatted pleasantly.

The girl returned and her mother introduced them. They chatted and he asked the mother if he could take her daughter for a walk around the ferry. He was from Northern Ireland, they from Liverpool.

They walked and talked and sat down. He thought "I'm going to kiss her. She will slap my face or walk away or stay put." He kissed her. She said "Do that again."

They are married 65 years now. He told me their story: he is 88 and she 84 and I was with them for Holy Communion and for the anointing of the sick. "I love her now as I always have," he said. "She was the first girl who ever attracted my attention and she has been a wonderful wife and mother."

She sat there in her little world of deep dementia, unable to speak now, but he understands each of her sounds and gestures, especially her little giggles. It was a privilege to be with them, to share the story, the love and the faith. (Their story shared with permission)
