Weownomy: The Platform That Lets Users Earn Money and Control Their Data

NEWARK, DELAWARE, UNITED STATES, MAY 13, 2021 Weownomy is a new digital-income personal social networking platform where users can earn money and control their data. The world's first platform to offer this opportunity. The first version of the Weownomy Web will be released with 2000 users in Mid-December 2021 and will allow you to earn by using it, while also having ownership of your data. The full build will be launched late May 2022.

In the article we explore how it is possible for individuals to take back ownership of their personal data by earning money from their social media activity participation with a new Weownomy Social Networking Platform.

"The time has come to rethink our social networks and build a more democratic, open and decentralized internet that puts users in control of their data, their privacy, and even some profit," said Ssemakula Peter Luyima, President and Founding CEO at Weownomy Platform Corporation.

Users of the platform will be able to: Earn - users will have access to many opportunities for earning such as providing content or by being a creative contributor. With an in-depth knowledge of how we spend our time online, marketers can use this information in targeted advertising campaigns which pay consumers instead of relying on outmoded metrics like age and gender.

The internet has revolutionized the way we live, work and play. However, one of the most important aspects that is often overlooked is privacy. Weownomy understands this need for more control over our data and how it can be used to influence us as consumers in an increasingly digital world. With a shift from centralized media ownership to individual content creators who have been displaced by algorithms, Weownomy's platform will empower its users through privacy settings to own their content.

This global user-owned personal social networking business model will allow people worldwide to earn money by simply sharing their data anonymously on its platform in exchange for receiving targeted advertising services and online discounts. The digital marketplace where buyers and sellers meet is decentralized so there are no middlemen involved in order to ensure both parties benefit.

A User-Centered Privacy Program that actually works.

Privacy has been an ongoing problem for the digital age. It is not a matter of if your data will be hacked, but when it will happen. Weownomy's solution to this problem? A user-centered privacy program that actually works! The Platform allows users to store their own personal information and decide who can access it, how much they want to share, and with whom they want to share it. With no third party involved in sharing or storing any data.

A Global user-owned platform that will work with different regulators globally to meet the best practice user owned consent requirements. With our implementation of a user-centered privacy program, we will be able to achieve success in a reasonable time frame. Using and disclosing personal information is only allowed if there is explicit consent from the individual or authorized by law; it can also stop using or disclosing personal information upon request and include specific platform policy to protect personal information of children and vulnerable groups.

The Platform We've Been Waiting For.

The Weownomy platform has been designed to protect the privacy of users. This is a critical issue as we move into an era where people are relying more and more on digital platforms for their news, information, shopping, and other activities. In order to ensure that data collected by these companies remains secure and not sold or used inappropriately in ways that could harm us, Weownomy provides a platform where we can determine what is trustworthy online.

It will provide an income opportunity for those who create content and data, enabling users to trust the information they consume online. There are countless ways we interact with our phones on a daily basis; one of them being browsing the internet. With over 2 billion people using mobile devices in 2021, it's hard not to think about how this changes the way we communicate. From connecting with friends and family to reading news stories or articles - all these tasks.

Weownomy has been built to empower people by protecting their privacy, data and online interactions.

No More Fake News: Weownomy Introduces New Platform To Combat Misinformation. It's no secret that the spread of misinformation through social media is a major problem these days. In many cases, it can be difficult for users to determine what information is credible or whether they are being manipulated on platforms like Facebook.

This new platform is called Weownomy "weown economy". It offers a better way to empower consumers in an increasingly digital world, and it has the potential to deliver on many of the goals that have eluded earlier attempts at creating a trustworthy internet.

Data privacy is an issue that's near and dear to many people. With data breaches becoming more common, it's important for users to take control of their information and be able to decide what happens with it. Weownomy Platform provides the necessary tools to demonstrate and implement a successful user owned data privacy program. Users can see what information is being collected about them, control how it's used, and decide whether or not they want their data shared with third parties.

Users have complete access to their profile which includes: - A summary of all your personal information - What information is being collected from you by Weownomy - Who we share your data with. Our transparent new democratic system will allow you to view the various levels of incentives that serve as rewards for contribution while also allowing you to establish much stronger connections amongst each other.
