

Roy Warne – Barrister

Roy studied law at the University of Cambridge. After obtaining his law degree he completed his studies at post-graduate level for a professional qualification. He has now retired from everyday practice and offers you the benefit of his long and varied experience as a lawyer in criminal and civil law (including medical negligence, inquests and harassment cases), as well as a McKenzie friend.

He has represented clients in the highest courts, tribunals and public enquiries. He firmly believes that access to justice is a basic right for everyone, not just the rich, and condemns the savage reductions to legal aid and increases in court fees.

Roy always engages with clients, being acutely aware of the anxiety and mystique surrounding the law. Real law is not the same as TV law! He always considers court proceedings as a last resort and will give strong advice on your prospects, one way or the other.
