MARYVILLE HOUSE

Built by Laurence Corban in the early 19th Century, the delightful Maryville House is a Georgian house built in a classic villa style, the main block of two storeys and four bays with deep eaves and with a lower three bay projection to the rear. Believed to have replaced an older structure on the site, the house was for many years the dower house to nearby Ballinacarriga Estate. Laurence Corban was the founder of the Maryville Mill (demolished in 1995), one of the larger in the district, located to the south west. In Lewis's 1837 survey the house is recorded as "a handsome mansion of recent erection and finely situated on the Funcheon River". The house passed from the family circa 1965.

Maryville House is set on rising ground, discreetly situated behind high walls, and commanding a fine position overlooking the wooded valley with a bright sunny south-westerly aspect. Set in well landscaped grounds, the house is approached via entrance piers with iron gates and rails and a sweeping drive running alongside the front paddocks.

The spacious and well-proportioned house, in need of updating, retains many of its original features and much of its fabric with large sash windows with shutters, pitch pine floors and marble fireplaces. There is fine plasterwork cornicing and ceiling roses to the principle reception rooms, which have high ceilings, and to the exceptional double-height staircase hall, with cantilevered stairs top lit by a glazed dome. The impressive accommodation extends to some 445 sq metres (4800 sq ft.) including three reception rooms, five bedrooms and three bathrooms.

Maryville House extends to circa 3.70 hectares (9.14 acres) with a wonderful walled garden situated to the rear together with traditional cobble stone stable yard set adjacent to the house. The property represents a delightful package, enjoying a favourable edge of village setting yet with much privacy and security provided by the many mature trees and walled boundaries.

COUNTY CORK

Maryville House is situated on the southern edge of Kilworth, a popular village with a good range of amenities including primary school, arts centre, tennis and GAA clubs, pubs and supermarket. Located close to the Kilworth hills and Glansheskin woods there is varied and extensive walking locally together with fishing to the river Blackwater and its tributaries the Funcheon and Araglin. Golf is well catered for with courses locally at Fermoy and Mitchelstown with championship courses at Fota Island and Cork Golf Club.

The property is well placed for rapid access to Cork (via the M8 Dublin/Cork motorway) and to its International Airport together with the market town of Fermoy which offers a good range of shops, pubs, cafés, restaurants, banks and schools.

ACCOMMODATION

Ground Floor

Approached via a forecourt, limestone steps rise to a solid wood door framed by wing windows and a large original fanlight over. The exceptional staircase hall, top-lit by a glazed dome, is at the centre of the house, with cantilevered stairs wrapping around and rising to the gallery landing. Situated off the hall are the impressive drawing room and dining room, both double aspect rooms with three sash windows, overlooking the grounds and paddocks. They have pine floors and marble fireplaces with ornate corning and centre roses. A sitting room overlooks the side garden. The kitchen, breakfast room and pantry are situated in the rear projection, with laundry room and stores off.

First Floor

To the first floor of the main block are three bedrooms and a bathroom set off the gallery landing, with a further two bedrooms and two bathrooms situated to the rear wing. There are lovely views over the grounds and surrounding countryside.

OUTSIDE

To the rear of the house is the gated house yard with garage, stores and pedestrian access to former coaching and stable yard. This cobbled yard is serviced off the drive comprises of a range of traditional whitewashed stone under slate outbuildings with eight loose boxes, former coach house and storage. A further traditional stone outbuilding, used as a machinery shed, is located behind the stable yard.

Gardens & Grounds

The house is surrounded by landscaped grounds with mature trees, including Beech and Chestnut, ringing the property. To the south side of the house, adjacent to the forecourt is the tennis/croquet lawn whilst there are three railed paddocks to the front and a further paddock to the rear. A particular feature of the property is the wonderful walled garden which extends to 0.31 hectares (0.80 acres) enclosed by fine high stone walls. The walled garden has fruit trees, soft fruit and vegetables. There is development potential here for a prime, private, edge of village site, subject to necessary consents.
