The 'Teaching Excellence Framework' (TEF) is forcing universities to raise tuition fees. The amount they charge will depend on their ranking as Gold, Silver or Bronze, based on: National Student Survey (NSS) scores, drop-out rates, and graduate employment figures.

Next year: £9,250 fees.

By 2020: £10,000?

None of the measurements directly measure teaching quality. But because the TEF claims to measure the quality of the education you received, the ranking Sheffield gets will determine how valuable your degree is seen as by employers.

But they can’t do it without final years...

They need your data to make it work.

By refusing to fill out the National Student Survey, we can prevent the government from getting the data it needs to raise tuition fees more and more each year.

Final years boycotting the NSS nationwide will give us power to force the government to backtrack on these plans. We have the power to win—it just needs you.

Join students nationwide.

Don’t fill in the National Student Survey.

Our action is supported by the National Union of Students, the lecturers union UCU and over 25 SUs across the country.
