Egoless Outburst

OSHO tells us how to be in love with existence

Lovemaking or sexual intimacy is one of the greatest sources of egoless experiences. That too has been destroyed by the priests; they have condemned it, so it is no longer such a great experience. Such a condemnation for so long has conditioned the minds of people. Even while they are making love, they 'know' deep down that they are doing something wrong. Some guilt is lurking somewhere. And this is so even for the most modern, the most contemporary, and even the younger generation.

For thousands of years, we have been told that sex is the greatest sin. It has become part of our blood, bone and marrow. So even if you know consciously that there is nothing wrong in it, the unconscious keeps you a little detached, afraid, guilt-ridden, and you cannot move into it totally.

If you can move into lovemaking totally, the ego disappears, because at the highest peak, at the highest climax of lovemaking, you are pure energy. The mind cannot function. With such joy, with such an outburst of energy, the mind simply stops. It is such an upsurge of energy that the mind is at a loss, it does not know what to do now. It is perfectly capable of remaining in function in normal situations, but when anything very new and vital happens, it stops. And sex is the most vital thing.

Hence, the great science of tantra became possible. Patanjali and yoga worked on the lines of deep sleep; they chose that path to transform deep sleep into a conscious state so you know who you are, so you know what you are at the centre. Tantra chose lovemaking as a window towards existence. All that is needed is to uproot the conditioning that priests have put into you. They did what they did so that they could become mediators and agents between you and God, so that your direct contact was cut. Naturally, you would need somebody else to connect you, and the priest would become powerful. And the priest has been powerful down the ages.

Whoever can put you in contact with real power, will become powerful. Godliness is real power, the source of all power. The priest has always remained more powerful

OSHOSPEAK

- 1 Due to wrong conditioning, most people deep down feel that it's wrong to make love
- 2 During physical intimacy, the ego disappears, because at the highest peak, you are pure energy
- 3 Love is a phenomenon, where the ego disappears and you are fully conscious than kings. Now the scientist has taken the place of the priest, because he knows how to unlock the doors of nature's hidden power. The priest knows how to connect you with godliness, and the scientist knows how to connect you with nature. But the priest has to disconnect you first, so no individual private line remains between you and godliness. He has spoilt your inner sources, poisoned them. He became very powerful but the whole humanity became lustless, loveless, and full of guilt.

Drop that guilt completely. While making love, think of prayer, meditation, and godliness. While making love, burn incense, chant, sing, dance.

Your bedroom should be a temple, a sacred place. And lovemaking should not be a hurried thing. Go deeper into it; savour it as slowly and as gracefully as possible. And you will be surprised. You have the key. Existence has not sent you into the world without keys. But those keys have to be used, you have to put them into the lock and turn them.

Love is another phenomenon, one with the most potential, where the ego disappears and you are conscious, fully conscious, pulsating, and vibrating. You are no more an individual; you are lost into the energy of the whole.

Then, gradually let this become your very way of life. What happens at the peak of love has to become your discipline — not just an experience. Then whatsoever you are doing and wherever you are walking — early in the morning with the sun rising — have the same feeling, the same merger with existence. Lying down on the ground, the sky full of stars, have the same merger again. Feel one with the earth.

Slowly, slowly, lovemaking should give you the clue for how to be in love with existence itself. And then the ego is known as fiction, is used as fiction. And if you use it as fiction, there is no danger. The Book of Wisdom, courtesy:
