

It can be hard to know what steps to take when you lose someone close to you.

Coping with a bereavement can be a very difficult time and we want you to know we're here to try and help. As well as coming to terms with your loss you may also be faced with the practical task of dealing with your loved ones' financial affairs.

This guide is designed to give you practical and useful information on how to notify us of a death, what happens to someone's mortgage account when they die and what steps we take once we have been notified.

As well as providing information about what happens at Precise Mortgages, we have provided you with some steps which may help you during this time. We hope you will find them useful.

Registering the death

The government's website www.gov.uk/when-someone-dies is a good place to help guide you through the next steps, it includes information on who can register the death and what they'll need to do.

Below are some of the steps you may need to take:

- | | |
|--|---|
| <ul style="list-style-type: none">▶ formally register a death at a registry office▶ obtain copies of any doctors/medical notes or certificates▶ obtain the death certificate▶ contact a funeral director▶ notify any solicitors or accountants | <ul style="list-style-type: none">▶ if there's a will, consider any special stipulations or requirements▶ notify the executors or appoint an administrator▶ notify any companies or organisations that may need to know about the death |
|--|---|

Once you have registered the death you will be given a death certificate and a certificate for either burial or cremation. You will need to register the death within 8 days in Scotland and within 5 days in England, this is normally at the closest registry office to where the death happened. You may need to make an appointment to do this.

You may want to request more than one copy of the death certificate in case any organisation requires the original document. Please note there may be an additional charge for extra copies.

Documents we will need

There are a few things we will need to see once you have notified us that someone has died.

- ▶ An original or certified copy of the death certificate or interim death certificate, if this is a copy we accept certification from the following professionals;
 - an FCA authorised person or firm;
 - a qualified solicitor;
 - a bank or building society manager/employee (must include Branch Stamp);
 - an actuary or accountant (who is a member of a recognised professional body);
 - a notary public;
 - a General Practitioner or Dentist; or
 - you can use the Post Office Certification Service.
- ▶ The name and address of the personal representatives if known as this lets us know who we need to correspond with.
- ▶ Confirmation of who will be managing the estate.

As soon as you let us know someone has died, we will update our records. Until we receive the death certificate, or interim death certificate, unfortunately all correspondence sent from Precise Mortgages will be in the name of the deceased.

What happens to the mortgage account?

Upon receiving the death certificate what happens next will depend on the legal ownership of the property. If you are unsure what the legal ownership is, we can provide this information to you. The property will either be registered in the sole name of the customer, or if the property is held in joint names, it will be registered as either "joint tenants" or "tenants in common".

Joint Tenants

- ▶ if the property is registered as "joint tenants" we will update the mortgage account to the sole name of the surviving account holder.
- ▶ if payments are made by direct debit we will be in contact to ensure that the direct debit details are still correct.
- ▶ the remaining account holder will then receive a letter confirming this information.

Tenants in Common or Sole Name

- ▶ if the property is registered as "tenants in common" or in the sole name of the customer, we will need to know who is handling the estate.
- ▶ we'll need the name and address of the person dealing with the estate, this may be an executor or solicitor.
- ▶ information that will help us with next steps depends on whether a solicitor has been appointed; if a Grant of Probate or a Letter of Administration has been issued; or if there is a will.
- ▶ we'll need to know the status of the bank account which we are currently taking mortgage payments from.

Letting other companies know

Below are some of the organisations you may also need to notify:

- ▶ utility companies
- ▶ banks or building societies
- ▶ credit or store cards
- ▶ loan providers
- ▶ insurance companies

Tell Us Once Service

There is a "Tell Us Once" service that may be available in your area which will notify all the relevant government departments, please visit <https://www.gov.uk/after-a-death/organisations-you-need-to-contact-and-tell-us-once> or ask the registrar when notifying them of the death.

Additional Support

Bereavement Advice Centre

There are many practical issues to manage when someone dies. The Bereavement Advice Centre supports and advises people on what they need to do after a death.

The service is free and their contact details are:

The legal terms explained

Will

A legal document where a person outlines their wishes for the distribution of his/her assets after their death.

Testate

Where a person dies having made a valid will, and the estate passes in accordance with the directions in the Will.

Grant of Probate

If the deceased has a will, the executor or administrator will apply for a Grant of Probate. The Grant is a legal document which confirms that the executor has the authority to deal with the deceased person's assets (property, money and belongings). This is called 'administering the estate'.

Intestate

When a person dies without having made a valid will, he/she is said to have died intestate, the estate passes in accordance with the Administration of Estates to the next of kin.

Personal representative

This term can be used for both executors and administrators, we will also refer to Personal Representatives when corresponding with the person dealing with the estate until Grant of Probate has been obtained.

We can provide literature in large print, Braille and audio tape. Please ask us for this leaflet in an alternative format if you need it.
