

The Best Sustainable Fashion Brands

Want to shop sustainably but not sure where to start? Get to know the best sustainable fashion brands around...

BY KERRI STOLERMAN

Prepare your wallet and get ready to be inspired and thrown into the wonderful world of sustainability all at once, with these, the best sustainable fashion brands...

The fashion industry is one of the most polluting industries in the world. It's also one that is swiftly changing its ways by listening to the wants and needs of mindful consumers who can afford to want to know their clothing, accessories and shoes are being made sustainably, in an ethical process where no one gets hurt, underpaid, or undervalued. Whilst the Pretty Little Things, Boohoos and Primarks of the world may continue to thrive despite highly un-fashionably unethical practices, there are tons of wonderful, slow-fashion brands worth shouting about. Fashion brands that understand that good quality clothing should be kept forever and recycled, upcycled, or passed onto others via charity shops or re-selling websites such as Depop and Vestiaire Collective. Fashion brands that have taken the time to consider their supply chain and who take pride (rightly so) in being able to say that they are a sustainable brand.

Whether it's out of genuine concern for the planet or just to capture a new type of customer who follows the sustainability-related buzzwords popping up everywhere right now, many brands are catching on to the sustainability wave by creating sustainable capsule collections. But as much of a positive a change as this is, a singular collection just isn't enough. So, as part of our commitment to reducing our carbon footprint and encouraging you to do the same, we've researched and rounded up the best sustainable fashion, footwear and accessory brands to support, who ensure they are being as sustainable as they possibly can. Thought sustainable fashion meant un-fashionable fashion? These brands will make you reconsider...

Taylor Yates

Taylor Yates

British accessory brand 'Taylor Yates' have mastered understated luxury, and are committing to sustainability, too. The leather they use is a by-product of food production, and for this, they have been awarded The Butterfly Mark by Positive Luxury for their company-wide commitment to sustainability.

[Tayloryates.com](https://www.taylor Yates.com)

Lilliput & Felix

Lilliput & Felix

British based swimwear and beachwear brand Lilliput & Felix are bringing something very necessary and new to the table – sustainable, stylish swimwear for summer. Since launching in 2014, it has gone on to create luxury, high-end pieces that ‘merge classic and contemporary styles’. The brand was awarded Positive Luxury’s Butterfly Mark for its commitment to social and environmental sustainability, and it’s no surprise – the peices made of solid fabrics are made with recycled fabrics, and other pieces are sustainably woven to order in small quantities in order to reduce waste. Lilliputandfelix.com