Dear parents and carers,

Some of you may have heard your children refer to the Accelerated Reader quizzes that they undertake at school. Just to give you a bit of further information on what they are, these are iPad based quick quizzes that the children do when they finish a reading book - this can only be done in school due to licencing restrictions.

They are designed to establish the level of comprehension children have, rather than just their ability to decode words. If they do well, the children will be asked to change their book, however if the quizzes indicate a lack of understanding, the children may be asked to reread the book.

As teachers, we can use the reporting tool within Accelerated Reader to look at how many quizzes children have taken, how many questions they have got correct and even how many words they have read. All of this information can be provided for you at parents' evening, so do please ask your child's class teacher if you would like to know more.

Yours sincerely,

Miss Warburton

English Leader
