

Gwyn Stephenson

I grew up and have lived in Northumberland for most of my adult life. After graduating with first class honours in Biotechnology & Microbiology I started work at Newcastle University where I was based in the Careers Service in a team responsible for the launch of a work skills graduate training programme. From 2000 to 2009 I worked as Marketing Manager for a construction equipment manufacturer with a global customer base. I now work as a freelance Marketing Consultant still within the construction sector. I have two children both currently at Humshaugh School. In my spare time I enjoy running, printmaking and textiles.
