This Week's Learning

We have been learning all about families this week as we finish the text of Ben and Gran and the Whole Wide World. We sang about how many people are in our family and looked at our family pictures comparing who has more or less siblings.

Something Special

The children have really embraced this term's book looking at travel and transport, buildings, art, baking and families. It links with the Easter holidays perfectly as many will be staying at home or going on holiday, visiting friends and family and spending time together. This is a lovely activity and there are many others online.

Over the Spring break, Brambles have provided some ideas for activities to do that can be brought back into Brambles to share. They link to the seven areas of learning that we cover at pre-school. They were put in the children's paper rabbit bags with their work and Easter treats. It is not homework and does not need to be completed, only if you would like to. Alternatively you could send a postcard or send in a photo or a drawing, as the children do like to have their time to shine at carpet time and tell their friends their exciting news from home. This also links in to next term's theme of 'Marvelous Me.'

Brambles staff wish you all a super Spring break
