Augustus was sad. He couldn't find his smile. He had a stretch and set off to find it. First, he looked under a cluster of bushes, but he couldn't find his smile. Then he climbed the tallest trees, but he couldn't find his smile. Further and further he searched, he scaled the highest mountains where snow clouds swirled making frost patterns in the air. He swam to the bottom of the deepest oceans with shoals of tiny, shiny fish.

He pranced and paraded through the desert making shadow shapes in the sun. Augustus danced in the rain he splashed through the puddles bigger and deeper. There under his nose he saw his smile.

Augustus realised his smile would always be there whenever he was happy.
