I have been teaching in Honiton for almost 20 years – 18 of those at Littletown Primary Academy. I have had differing rolls over the years, including music lead and more recently, head of literacy. Both of my children came to the school so I really feel as though I'm 'Littletown' to the core!

I joined the governing body last year as a teacher governor as I felt that it was important for me to have more of an understanding of, and a say in, the running of the school, its policies and management and its general ethos. As a teacher, I feel that it is important to bridge the gap between the governing body and the staff of a school as I am in the perfect position to understand directly how decisions made, will affect staff and children.

I have already found the experience to be very rewarding and I look forward to the inevitable future challenges.
