Message from the Head

It has been another week where we have felt like we have taken a bit of a hit, with the announcement of the delay to the next step of the national roadmap out of covid. Although I am sure that we all understand the need for caution and would much rather a postponement than a step backwards, it still feels like a blow. Especially in school where it was the first opportunity that protective measures and restrictions would be eased for us. But sadly not, these remain for us as they have been for the entire year. This means that we are rapidly trying to re-evaluate the tentative plans we had put in place for events this term. We are working with the Acorn Education Trust to thoroughly risk assess everything, and work out what we can and can't do, and how we can achieve things safely. I appreciate your patience as we work through this process, and we will share the outcomes with you as soon as possible. At the heart of all the decisions we make will be the most and best we can achieve for the children within the current guidelines.

There has been much media interest in the report published by Ofsted last week which highlighted a shocking level of Sexual Abuse and Sexual Violence within all schools. I wanted to let you know that as a school we undertook training for all staff last term about Peer-to-Peer Sexual Abuse and Violence, which included how we would respond to incidents of this within school and more importantly establish a culture of zero tolerance and no excuses. All staff also undertook Relationships and Sex Education (RSE) training during the TD Day last week. This was in preparation for delivering RSE units of work, which are underway across the school currently. This has also provided a timely opportunity for us to address themes with children in an age-appropriate manner, such as: their right to privacy in regards to their own body; consent in terms of anyone interacting with them physically; and challenging stereotypes and prejudices. All teaching and learning is rooted within our ethos of respect and dignity for all which comes from 'Always treating others as you would like to be treated'.

In our Good Learning Book this week:

Winter: Stars of the Week are Charlotte and Olive. Well done to all of Winter Class for their science work on plants.

Spring: Well done to Leo, Farleigh and Hugo for gaining their full pen licence.

Summer: Well done to Ela for excellent whole class reading. Also, congratulations to Ela and Alex for passing their recent music exams.

Autumn: A big well done to all of Autumn class for making a fantastic start to the end of year production.
