As you can see from the information in this leaflet, many games and their sites are aimed at children beyond the primary age group.

Our aim is to ensure that we support our communities in modelling how to use games consoles and other technologies safely and appropriately.

Please get in touch if you would like to ask us about anything.... There's no such thing as a silly question.

The people to ask in our school are:

Mr Bradley or Miss Cameron

Thank you for your support.

Universal - Open to all

Parental Guidance - Open to all
A PG film should not disturb a child aged around eight or older but parents are advised to consider whether the content may upset younger or more sensitive children

No-one younger than 12 may see a 12A film in a cinema unless accompanied by an adult

No-one younger than 15 may see a 15 film in a cinema

No-one younger than 18 may see an 18 film in a cinema

It's worth remembering that whilst we are all used to these symbols, the ones below are specifically aimed at the games market. In the same way we wouldn't want our children seeing inappropriate scenes on TV or film, many of these consoles can access online content. The games themselves are covered under a similar classification law to those of film and DVD.

Roblox = Games can be violent (Commonsense Media)

This research was conducted in 2017 by Common Sense Media.

Did you know...?

It is possible to access inappropriate websites through many of these consoles?

Different consoles are better suited to different ages (e.g. Nintendo 3DS and Wii U have more games suitable for younger children.

Many games feature online multi-player gameplay (competing against or with other players over the internet.) How can we be sure we know who these people are?

Games consoles do have parental controls.

Games consoles require an internet connection to download updates. Some remain connected in stand-by mode and download content when not in use. Turn them off when not in use. (This will save electricity too.)

Games consoles connect to online app or games stores which can be used to download games. E.g the current favourite if Fortnite (aimed at 14 yr olds+), which can enable children to buy additional apps/features.
