Together We Grow in Wisdom and Serve with Joy

Dear parents/carers,

We have had a great start to the Summer Term, welcoming Mrs Trevorah (Mrs T) to the team. Mrs T will be covering Mrs Abbott-Bray whilst she is on maternity leave along with Mrs McMorrow. My teaching commitment is also mainly in Brentor now. Mrs Abbott-Bray is still working safely from home, supporting the team and preparing to hand over her subject leader role to Mr Elliott (more information below).

Thank you for your patience with the new gate, we have had a couple of teething problems, but these are quick to fix. If you come to school during the school day, please press the bell on the wall by the small gate so that we can let you in.

School Improvement:

We are reallocating some of our subject leader roles across the school. Mr Payton will be taking on Maths as well as PE and has started some monitoring with the support of Mr Elliott, who will be leading grammar, spelling, punctuation and writing. Miss Davy will be leading phonics and reading, and Mrs Sutherland will continue to lead Science across the Trust as well as the school.

As you know, our main school improvement priority has been reading and this has resulted in great progress across the whole school. We will continue to focus on this area of English alongside Writing, which we now need to improve inline with reading.

Class teachers have shared new themes and focuses for this half term via Class Dojo, as well as knowledge organisers. They will also be sharing examples of national year group writing expectations over the next week or two, so that you are also aware of the expectations of your child.

This week, teaching staff attend Trust History staff training led by our Trust History lead. We have already started to use some of the approaches that were shared. Please ensure that as part of your child's home learning, they learn the facts that they need to know from their knowledge organisers. This ensures that lessons can focus on the enquiry element of the History curriculum.

School attendance and absence

Going to school regularly is important for your child's future. Parents are responsible for making sure their children receive full-time education. Parents are legally responsible for making sure that children attend school. If your child doesn't go to school, you could get fined or prosecuted.

Benefits of school attendance

Good attendance at school is not just beneficial, it's essential. Attending school is directly linked to improved exam performance which should in turn lead to further learning opportunities and better job prospects. As well as this, going to school helps to develop:

- Friendships
- Social skills
- Team values
- Life skills
- Cultural awareness
- Career pathways

Absence from school

- All schools must record details of pupils' attendance and absence at school. They do this at the beginning of morning and afternoon sessions meaning that each day your child receives two half day marks.
- If your child is going to be absent from school, (e.g. for an unavoidable appointment) then you should let the school know as soon as possible. If your child has been absent due to an unexpected event such as bereavement or illness then you must also let the school know on the first day of absence in accordance with the school's attendance policy.
- The school will then record the absence. If you fail to notify the school as to why your child has not been present then the school may record that period of absence as being unauthorised.
- The Education Welfare Service (EWS) has access to all attendance information for each pupil and if your child is missing school without good reason, schools and the EA have the authority to find out why.

Attendance in figures

- Schools will advise parents of a child's attendance levels at least once a year. This will usually include a percentage attendance figure.
- Achieving 90 per cent in an exam or test is a fantastic result but if your child is at school for only 90 per cent of the school year then they will have missed 19 days - almost four whole weeks of school.
- For primary-age children, this can mean almost 120 guided learning hours. This is a big gap for any child to make up.
- If your child is a pupil at post-primary school, 120 guided learning hours is the equivalent of studying one full-time GCSE (normally taken over two years).

How to prevent your child from missing school

You can help prevent your child missing school by:

- having a routine from an early age and sticking it to it
- making sure your child understands the importance of good attendance and punctuality
- making sure they understand the possible implications for themselves and you as a parent if they don't attend
- taking an interest in their education - ask about school work and encourage them to get involved in school activities

- discussing any problems they may have at school and letting their teacher or Head Teacher know about anything that is causing concern

- not letting them take time off school for minor ailments or holidays during term time

To avoid disrupting your child's education, you should arrange (as far as possible), appointments and outings:

- after school hours
- at weekends
- during school holidays

Term time holidays

- Term time holidays have been increasing over the last number of years. Parents should make every effort to ensure that their child does not miss school due to holiday plans. Schools are not obliged to agree to you taking your child on holiday during term time. They are entitled to record such holidays as being an unauthorised absence

Support for parents

- As a parent, if you find it hard to talk to your child about their attendance at school or other school-related matters, support is available.

Support from your child's school

- Your child's school should have an attendance policy in place and made available to you, normally from the school website. As a parent or guardian, you should ensure that you adhere to the guidance provided in that policy regarding attendance and notifying absence.

- Your child's school is the first place to discuss any attendance problems. The school should try to agree a plan with you to improve your child's attendance.

- A school can refer your child to the Education Welfare Service (EWS) if they feel there is reason to be concerned at their level of attendance. The EWS is a specialist education support service which helps young people of a compulsory school age and their families to get the best out of the education system. The EWS can offer advice and support to help you and your child to have good attendance at school

Support from the Education Authority

The Education Authority (EA) can also help if you are struggling to make sure that your child goes to school

Support from other organisations

As well as school and the EA, you may also be able to get advice and assistance from other organisations.

These may include your local community centre or local community group.

ParentingNI

provide a wide range of helpful advice and resources as well as a parent's helpline.

Parent Teacher Associations can also provide further information and resources through their website at ParentKind
