Supplemental Figure 4. Protein level differences between drought-stressed plants and control plants at each time point. Red dot indicates the value of mean, and the white dot represents the value of median. In this violin plot, which combines a box plot and a kernel density plot, the first and third quartiles are represented by the edges of the thick center line.