Supporting Information for: Size-Selective Microcavity Array for Rapid and Efficient Detection of Circulating Tumor Cells

Masahito Hosokawa, Taishi Hayata, Yorikane Fukuda, Atsushi Arakaki, Tomoko Yoshino, Tsuyoshi Tanaka and Tadashi Matsunaga*

Department of Biotechnology, Tokyo University of Agriculture and Technology
2-24-16 Naka-cho, Koganei, Tokyo 184-8588, Japan

*Corresponding author. Fax: +81-42-385-7713. Phone: +81-42-388-7020.
E-mail: tmatsuna@cc.tuat.ac.jp

Contents
Figure S-1 The size distribution of tumor cell lines.

Figure S-2 Fluorescent images of cells recovered on the size-selective microcavity array. Hoechst-stained NCI-H358 cells were spiked into normal blood and recovered using the microfluidic device equipped with the size-selective microcavity array. Then, recovered cells were stained with Calcein-AM and EthD-1 and observed under a fluorescent microscope.
Figure S-1
Figure S-2