

Supplementary Figure S6: Regional north-south seismic cross section across the study area which shows the southern exposure of basement rocks and erosion in the Jurassic. Coarse grained deposits found in the southern wells are derived from this crystalline basement protolith. Inset map shows the depth to basement, and thereby the possible locations for intrabasinal basement exposure. Location of profile is given in inset figure with relative depth to basement.

