George Washington Imagines His Inheritance, Why Early America Must be Vast, and What ORCID Offers Humanists

Karin Wulf
Omohundro Institute of Early American History & Culture and William & Mary
ORCID Board, 2018-2020
(Please refrain from tweeting! This should publish in a week or two on Smithsonian.)

1. [Image]

2. [Image]

George Washington Papers, Series 4, General Correspondence: George Washington, Genealogy Chart. 1753.
18th c. British American Genealogical Profusion
“Table of Descents” from Blackstone’s Analysis (London, 1758) and Commentaries (Philadelphia, 1803)
“Table of Consanguinity” from John Grimke, The Duty of Executors and Administrators (New York, 1797).
Godwin Account Book, c 1740-1780.
(Brock Collection, Huntington Library),
• Jane Jefferson’s Family Record; TJeff LeCB; TJeff Prayer Book Family Record; TJeff “Farm Book”
Where is ORCID in the Humanities Research Cycle?

Seminars where work is shared:

“Ocean of Kin: Trafficking TransAtlantic Genealogies in 18th Century British America,” for the NYU Atlantic Workshop, October 2, 2018; and Festschrift for Toby Ditz, Johns Hopkins University, October 27, 2018.

Grant awards:

Publications not in the scholarly comms universe:

“George Washington Inherits the Future,” Smithsonian, May 2019