

Vulnerability and Resilience Embedded in Discourses: Literature, Media, and Actors' Cultural Knowledge in German and Polish River Regions

Thorsten Heimann,^{1,2*} Anna Barcz,^{3,4} Gabriela Christmann,^{2,5} Kamil Bembnista,² Petra Buchta-Bartodziej,⁴ Anna Michalak⁴

¹ Environmental Policy Research Centre (FFU), Freie Universität Berlin, Germany; thorsten.heimann@fu-berlin.de

² Department 'Dynamics of Communication, Knowledge and Spatial Development,' Leibniz Institute for Research on Society and Space, Erkner, Germany; gabriela.christmann@leibniz-irs.de, kamil.bembnista@leibniz-irs.de

³ Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society, Munich, Germany; Anna.Barcz@rcc.lmu.de

⁴ The Institute of Literary Research, Polish Academy of Sciences, Warsaw, Poland

⁵ Department of Sociology, Technical University Berlin, Germany

* Corresponding Author: Thorsten Heimann, Freie Universität Berlin, Environmental Policy Research Centre, Ihnestr. 22, 14195 Berlin, Germany, Email: thorsten.heimann@fu-berlin.de

Acknowledgements

This contribution is based on the research project 'Socio-Cultural Constructions of Vulnerability and Resilience. German and Polish Perceptions of Threatening Aquatic Phenomena in Odra River Regions' (CultCon), funded in the framework of BEETHOVEN program of the German and the Polish Research Foundation (DFG and NCN, respectively) (DFG-project no. 277230079, CH 864/5-1).

Word Count

6.983 words

Short Biographies

Thorsten Heimann is a sociologist and cultural scientist at the Environmental Policy Research Centre, Freie Universität Berlin. His research examines socio-spatial and cultural differences in environment and climate change related behavior.

Anna Barcz is a Fellow at the Rachel Carson Center for Environment and Society in Munich (2018-2019). Her current research concentrates on bringing literature to socio-cultural research on environmental hazards.

Gabriela B. Christmann is Head of the Department "Dynamics of Communication, Knowledge and Spatial Development" at the Leibniz Institute for Research on Society and Space, as well as an Adjunct Professor at the Technical University Berlin. Her main areas of research are sociology of knowledge, vulnerability and resilience, social innovations as well as digitalisation processes in urban planning.

Kamil Bembnista is a PhD candidate in communication studies at the University Duisburg/Essen and a research associate at the Leibniz Institute for Research on Society and Space. His background oscillates between sociology and communication studies. Currently he examines the discursive construction of the German/Polish borderland.

Petra Buchta-Bartodziej is a researcher at the Institute of German Philology at the Silesian University in Katowice.

Anna Michalak is a Phd candidate in cultural studies at the University of Warsaw.