The Most Expensive Caper

My name is Bronze Blue, but people call me Medal. I live in the Royal Penthouse Suite in Switzerland. The most expensive hotel room in the world. I am a rock climber by day and a con man by night. I've stolen many things like Fabergé eggs, jewelry (for my girlfriend), and even a car. But now, I have to tell you about my greatest caper ever!

I was reading the Scholastic 2014 Book of World Records when I came across the "Largest Diamond" record. I saw that it was the Golden Jubilee. That's when I got the great idea to steal it. I called my best friend, Roger and my girlfriend, Rose. They agreed to help me with the heist. We planned for weeks to figure out a way in. Finally after a full month, we figured out a way. We had one problem, though. One of the security guards was also a surveillance expert.

When we first got in, they were celebrating the 25th anniversary for when it was discovered. So they easily made it to the vault where it was held. So we easily stole it. We hit a snag when we got it, though. Because it was so heavy, whenever I had it in my pocket, I tilted to one side. So I had to pretend that I was a bit woozy. When I got up to the main floor, everyone thought I was woozy. Although, my celebration didn't last long because, one of the guests saw a part of the diamond. When they said "The Golden Jubilee", I made a run for it. I barely escaped the sea of people. We escaped via helicopter. That was the closest I ever came to being arrested.

After that I quit my criminal life, married my girlfriend, and became an Interpol Agent. I still kept the things I stole though. I'll return them someday. I know I will.
