Famed aviator, Amelia Earhart was on a world flight when she lost contact with a ship called, Itaska, on July 2, 1937. She was flying to Howland Island to get fuel. The plane was believed to have disappeared into the Pacific Ocean.

There have been some rumors on how she disappeared. Some more realistic than others.

One rumor was that she ran out of fuel, crashed and died in the Pacific Ocean. Another rumor is that she survived the world flight, moved to New Jersey, and became Irene Bolam.

People have been frantically searching for the famed female aviator. As well as her navigator, Fred Noonan. We may very never find out about this shocking mystery, but we know one thing. The world will miss Amelia Earhart.
