

1. Develop an argument to counter that of someone who believes that children from poor families always come to school with fewer literacy experiences than middle-class youngsters. Cite research contained in this chapter to bolster your argument.

2. Using the memories of your own family life as a young child, discuss some activities that you feel helped your literacy development. Include any books or materials that you especially remember.