

Lost Redesdale – Community Archaeology project

Redesdale contains a rich diversity of historic remains, from Neolithic farming communities and Roman military occupation through to the Anglo-Scottish Border Wars, Border Reivers and 19th/20th Century reservoir construction. Despite this, Redesdale's historic landscape is poorly recorded and understood.

This project aims to better understand and tell the story of Redesdale by investigating its cultural heritage, engaging local people and volunteers in historical research and field archaeology.

Get involved in this project! You could take part in:

- archaeological investigations
- help discover unrecorded historic sites in Redesdale
- gain new skills in archaeological surveying and recording
- help research and record Redesdale's rich cultural heritage
