David Whale, FBHVC Chairman said, "In an ever increasingly digital world, the historic vehicle community faces a number of challenges in order to keep pace. As a result, our member organisations are increasingly seeking advice and guidance from the Federation. The Federation itself must also develop to ensure we keep abreast of new technologies and communication methods. This will be key to ensuring our resilience and ability to reach the widest possible audience through creating a valuable online resource that supports the Federation's aims."

Speaking about his appointment, Tim Jarrett said, "I 'am honoured to have the opportunity to contribute to the historic vehicle movement. After growing up immersed in Vintage cars and engineering I've benefited from so many opportunities and made so many friends. It is fantastic to be able to support the use of historic vehicles and help others benefit from the same opportunities I have by contributing my professional expertise to the organisation."
