

An Exhibition of recent Work by the Highland Quilters

This year, our event has expanded to include a second location! In the Dornoch West Church Hall we are delighted to have an exhibition of quilts by the Highland Quilters.

Following on from their successful exhibition in Inverness last year, the ladies of the Highland Quilters will exhibit recent work in a variety of styles and techniques.

Entry is free and members of the Highland Quilters will be on hand to talk about their work and demonstrate how a quilt is made.

The exhibition coincides with the Quilting Masterclass to be taught by Sheena Norquay in the Dornoch Social Club on Saturday 15th March.

Highland Quilters is a quilting group based in Inverness which has regular meetings and runs talks and workshops for members.

The group's beginnings can be traced as far back as April 1980, with a meeting at Sheena Norquay's home. This grew into Haugh Quilters, who continued to meet as a 'house group' until growing numbers forced a move to the Dunbar Centre in Church Street, Inverness in 1989.

Recently, the group has been involved with the 'Linus Project', making quilts for the patients of the children's ward at the Raigmore Hospital.
