

Bronze Age Metalwork from the Moray Firth Area

Monday 3rd, 10th, 17th & 24th February

10.00am – 1pm

The Reading Room, Inverness Library

Have you ever wondered how you find out about finds from an area?

The North Kessock and History Local History Society currently has an ongoing project - Feats of Clay - which is investigating the context for clay moulds found in recent excavations at Bellfield, North Kessock. The moulds were used to make clay sickles in the late Bronze Age (c. 950-800), and are rare evidence of metalworking from this period.

This ARCH course will complement the project, showing how to find out about known Bronze Age metalwork from the Moray Firth area. We will compile a gazetteer of known metalwork from the area, and where possible obtain photographs, including taking pictures of objects in local collections and Edinburgh. The results will be used by Trevor Cowie who is writing a book for the Feats of Clay project.

Courses will meet at the Reading Room in Inverness Library in the old Archives room. No experience necessary.

Susan Kruse, ARCH

To reserve a place contact: 01349 868230 and leave a message

or

email: info@archhighland.org.uk

Archaeology for Communities
in the Highlands

Bronze Age Metalwork from the Moray Firth Area

Monday 3rd, 10th, 17th & 24th February

10.00am – 1pm

The Reading Room, Inverness Library

Have you ever wondered how you find out about finds from an area?

The North Kessock and History Local History Society currently has an ongoing project - Feats of Clay - which is investigating the context for clay moulds found in recent excavations at Bellfield, North Kessock. The moulds were used to make clay sickles in the late Bronze Age (c. 950-800), and are rare evidence of metalworking from this period.

This ARCH course will complement the project, showing how to find out about known Bronze Age metalwork from the Moray Firth area. We will compile a gazetteer of known metalwork from the area, and where possible obtain photographs, including taking pictures of objects in local collections and Edinburgh. The results will be used by Trevor Cowie who is writing a book for the Feats of Clay project.

Courses will meet at the Reading Room in Inverness Library in the old Archives room. No experience necessary.

Susan Kruse, ARCH

To reserve a place contact: 01349 868230 and leave a message

or

email: info@archhighland.org.uk