WALT: write a character description. TN ①

Writing across the curriculum

There were footsteps coming nearer towards the door. August spun around in curiosity but turned back, covering his face with his hands, when he realised he was being stared at. Not long after, everyone's attention turned to the door which had been slammed open by an average sized boy with gelled, blonde hair and a cruel grin that approached his face once he caught sight of August.

"Good morning, classmates!" greeted the boy, still staring at August.

"Good morning, Oliver. There's a spare seat next to August. Please make yourself feel welcome - comfortably welcomed Miss Petosa.

Oliver's smirk saddened as he slowly strolled towards the seat the teacher pointed to. Just as he was about to sit down, purposely, he brushed past August's open pencil case and watched his stationery scatter to the floor carelessly.

"Oh no, I'm so sorry!" mocked Oliver.

"I - It's okay, no need to apologise," stuttered August.

Miss Petosa tutted and shook her head but when her back was turned, Oliver stuck his tongue out at August, showing his paperwhite teeth. August tried to pick them up until he got kicked by Oliver and let out a loud cry of pain. Everyone's eyes turned from their work to August.

"O-Ow!" yelled Oliver.

"What happened!?" exclaimed Miss Petosa.

"August kicked me!!" screamed Oliver.

The teacher's eyes widened as she stared at Oliver. August looked up and felt the teacher's eyes stare at him. He felt full of fear even though he had nothing to worry about as it wasn't his fault. Oliver rotated his head so Miss Petosa couldn't see and gave a wink of cruelty, knowing it was the other way round.
