From the age of 13, pupils are allowed to make their own decisions as to whether they wish to give consent for their data, in this case photos, to be processed. From this age pupils have the right to give or withdraw consent.

Parental consent won't automatically expire when the child reaches the age at which they can consent for themselves. We are keeping you informed of your daughter's decision so that you don't feel excluded from the process but the consent or withdrawal of consent should come from the pupil once they have the competence to understand what it means.

I _____ am the parent /carer of _____.

I am aware of, and agree that my daughter has withdrawn consent for her photos to be used in the ways as stated above.
