

Guidance for returning to work, school or preschool

During the week several questions have occurred from staff and parents if you can return to work/school/preschool if you are not feeling sick but for example still have a slight cough or a stuffy nose. This can concern staff/students/children with chronic conditions such as seasonal allergies or asthma. Symptoms from this can last over a long period of time and difficulties can occur if they have to be away from work or school for a long time.

It's difficult, to say the least impossible, for the staff in preschool or school to judge whether it's okay or not to return to school or preschool. First of all, it is up to every person or caregiver/parents to make that judgement.

According to department of public health contact your doctor or healthcare to make a qualified assessment if your are uncertain when to return to work/school/preschool.
