SAREX 25-15 aims to simulate a massive rescue operation of passengers from a ferry vessel, facing the growth of this kind of incidents experienced in the last years.

The mass rescue operation in large passenger ships requires the deployment of several means and resources, including the need for a close co-operation with different local, regional and international organizations. This exercise will make it possible:

- To increase and optimize the response and the use of the assets available in case of any emergency involving massive operations.
- To identify and distinguish the different responsible organizations and their response procedures.
- To improve the interoperability and co-operation among the different involved organizations and the emergency plans affected.
- To provide ongoing training of the emergency staff.
- To verify and test the new technologies developed within the activity 4 of the MONALISA 2.0 project, focused on the operational safety.
