Prism

☛ MY DAUGHTER and I often go camping and we have a SunnCamp Global 600, which is lovely, light and roomy with a handy porch for bad weather. But, as I sometimes camp alone I decided to buy a new one, which I could put up on my own. I went to a camping exhibition and noticed an unusual shaped tent. I was very impressed by the large windows and doors, which included mesh to let the air in and keep the bugs out. It has two large bedrooms with dividing curtain in a lovely large and light living area.

The salesman said it was the easiest tent to put up and that it could be done alone. He was right. It is higher than many tents inside and you don't have to bend when doing anything. I did need help when putting the flysheet over but have found that there is always someone willing to help.

It also comes with a carpet that fits the living area perfectly – lovely when sitting at night reading.

One night one of the campers who had looked the tent over while walking past, asked if he could check out the inside. He was very impressed. Then someone else took a photo of the tent – the room inside and how light it was also impressed her. I must say that I am very pleased that I bought it.

As to its name... SunnCamp Prism.

After buying the Prism I took my old tents to Millets for its appeal.

Unfortunately, the Prism is no longer made but it really is an eye-catching tent. And I believe it was an eight-berth – no wonder it is big inside. However, as Brenda has found, the frame made a big difference in ease of pitching. Readers looking for an eye-catching tent may want to check out SunnCamp's Evolution range. Ed
