Aperio

We are UVA's open access press and a joint venture of the UVA Library and UVA Press.

We publish high-impact, discipline-leading, and peer-reviewed journals that are immediately and freely available around the world, increase our authors' visibility and impact, and are expertly edited.

Eligibility

- Our journal publishing service is open to UVA faculty, staff, and students who are editors or editorial board members in any discipline
- We welcome editors who wish to move an existing journal, move from paywalls to open access, or start a new journal.

Our Services

- We provide editors with a robust journal management and publishing system. Editors are given access and control of this customizable system to solicit, review, and publish manuscripts.
- We offer editorial support, production services, hosting, indexing, metrics, & digital preservation
- Journal hosting and technical services are contracted through Ubiquity Press
- Sample journal published via Ubiquity: International Journal of the Commons
www.thecommonsjournal.org

Service Models

- We offer two models to better meet the needs of your journal. A complete comparison is on the following page.
- Both models include a core set of essential services and features to create professional journals.
- The full-service model is better suited for new journals and editors who want us to produce articles (typeset, create XML/PDFs) for them.
- The hosted model is a low-priced option more appropriate for existing journals and editors who take responsibility for article production.

Cost Sharing

- With our cost-sharing model, Aperio makes publishing affordable for our partners by covering most of the expenses. Partners will be responsible for either:
 1. Full Service Journals: $500/article ($625/article for STEM) must publish >12 articles/year
 2. Hosted Journals: $1,100 per year
- Set-up fee for all journals: $1,100
