A programme specification is a collection of key information about a programme of study (or course). It identifies the aims and learning outcomes of the programme, lists the modules that make up each stage (or year) of the programme, and the teaching, learning and assessment methods used by teaching staff. It also describes the structure of the programme, its progression requirements and any programme-specific regulations. This information is therefore useful to potential students to help them choose the right programme of study, to current students on the programme, and to staff teaching and administering the programme.

Programme Specification  MA Global Film and Television (Online)

This programme specification (PS) is designed for prospective students, enrolled students, academic staff and potential employers. It provides a concise summary of the main features of the programme and the intended learning outcomes that a typical student might reasonably be expected to achieve and demonstrate if he/she takes full advantage of the learning opportunities that are provided. More detailed information on the teaching, learning and assessment methods, learning outcomes and content for each module can be found in Definitive Module Documents (DMDs) and Module Guides.

Section 1

A. Programme Rationale

The MA in Global Film and Television is a two years part-time online course, offering a range of distinct critical and theoretical approaches. The course is innovative and differs from other programmes by exploring international examples of film and television via a new combination of methodologies, in forms of socio-stylistic analysis. It also investigates the various factors and effects of the global age, as expressed in works of film and television from around the world. As the industries of film and television become increasingly interconnected, the course considers their individual and shared stylistic and contextual relationships. The preferred methodological approach is of detailed studies in film and television criticism, and the close textual analysis of films and television programmes. Whereas stylistic criticism usually concentrates on Hollywood films, this MA is unique in applying the approach to (a) examples of US film beyond Hollywood, (b) of World Cinema, (c) of contemporary world television, (d) in tandem with strands of cultural theory not normally allied with close textual analysis. Placing the emphasis on the texts’ association with the global age, the course looks at some more familiar works from fresh perspectives, whilst making equal space for emergent and unexplored cinemas and television cultures. Students are asked to critique traditional theoretical and critical boundaries, seeking to see world cinema and television in a new light. The degree is dynamic in its cross-disciplinary links, bringing together specialists in film theory working within different areas of the School of Humanities. These connections and subject specialisms ensure that teaching and learning interlink directly with research: a dynamic most fruitfully realised at postgraduate level. The course engages with cutting-edge advancements in Film and Television Studies, contributing to the emergence of interest in stylistic explorations of globalisation.

This programme is relevant to the current climate, by keeping abreast of advances in communication technologies and providing a solution to the ever increasing constraints on time and monetary resources within personal budgets. The programme, offered 100% online provides a flexible solution for career development and skills enhancement relevant to the national and international audience without the risk of postponing or suspending employment. The programme will minimise direct and opportunity costs for students and employers.

The programme is supported by the dedicated business unit at UH to assist online programme development and delivery; UH Online. The collaboration between academic staff and UH Online ensures that the highest quality standards are maintained for content, delivery and student support and employment of the full range of delivery formats.
Specifically:

- A framework approach to learning has been applied to fully exploit e-learning potential. This approach uses an ongoing narrative which guides the student through relevant resources and tasks including presentations, podcasts, discussion blogs, Wikis, small group forums as well as e-books and journals.
- The programme facilitates opportunities for interaction between the academic staff and students replicating face-to-face delivery through: virtual lectures, skype meetings with personal tutors, virtual live discussion sessions.
- The programme maintains the flexible ‘self-paced’ nature of distance learning to fit with individual needs by posting these virtual lectures via podcast and online video.

B. Educational Aims of the Programme

The programme has been devised in accordance with the University’s graduate attributes of programmes of study as set out in UPR TL03.

Additionally this programme aims to:

1. Develop a comprehensive understanding and application (to MA level) of the history, theory and current status of the field of stylistic criticism in Film and Television Studies.
2. Develop the ability to extend the principles of stylistic criticism beyond Hollywood to examples of independent American film, World Cinema, contemporary global television, and in tandem with forms of cultural theory.
3. Explore of the similarities and differences of the increasingly close spheres of television and film production, and related effects on style and meaning.
4. Provide an opportunity to carry critical and theoretical learning into a professional application via studies of film and television festivals, programming, promotion and curation.

C. Intended Learning Outcomes

The programme provides opportunities for students to develop and demonstrate knowledge and understanding, skills and other attributes in the following areas. The programme outcomes are referenced the Frameworks for Higher Education Qualifications of UK Degree-Awarding Bodies (2014), and relate to the typical student. Additionally, the SEEC Credit Level Descriptors for Further and Higher Education (2016) have been used as a guiding framework for curriculum design.

<td>Acquisition of knowledge and understanding (A1-5) will be through a combination of virtual lectures, podcasts, small group work, and discussions with lecturers and expert practitioners in the field of global film and TV research and practice. In addition, students will be directed to appropriate, essential and supplementary text books, peer reviewed academic and practitioner journals, national and international film and television data and information repositories (including FIAF).</td>
<td>Knowledge and understanding are assessed through a combination of written assignments, progress tests, blogs and wikis¹. Within this assessment strategy there will be assigned essay titles to ensure exposure and critical understanding of new critical and theoretical concepts (A1-A3). A4 - Demonstrate comprehensive knowledge and understanding of the contemporary institutions of film and television and their distinct/shared modes of production

A5 - Demonstrate comprehensive knowledge and understanding of a broad range of classical, contemporary, Western and World film and television texts

Integrated learning of A1-A5 will be facilitated via a reflective log to be completed at the end of each module. This will be via a small group blog, which will be structured and will require rotational leadership amongst the group. This will encourage peer to peer learning and will help students to recap and refresh their learning experience over the life of the course.

In addition, tutorial support will be scheduled (minimum of once per semester). This will be via Skype or Adobe Connect.

Throughout, the learner will be encouraged to undertake independent study both to supplement and consolidate what is being taught/learnt and to broaden their individual knowledge and understanding of the subject.

In addition to summative assessments, formative assessments will also be scheduled to allow for improvement in performance.

and engagement with external bodies (C2).

Practical skills will also be developed through the critical analysis of case studies. In addition, students will work in groups to analyse case studies on a Wiki, by sourcing relevant evidence. This requires an understanding of expertise and terminology across the disciplines of film and television studies, as well as implementation of the principles of leadership and collaborative working.

Throughout, the student will be prompted to reflect on their own practice to consolidate learning and link to theory.
